Seasoned financial services policy professional and tactical strategist. Former Republican House and Senate senior staffer. Go-to advisor for large asset managers, consumer lenders and insurance companies.

Travis Norton draws on his deep background in financial services law and policy to develop high-impact advocacy and communication strategies to achieve clients' goals. Having served as general counsel to the House Judiciary and Financial Services committees and as staff director to Sen. Tim Scott's (R-SC) Senate Banking subcommittee, Travis's technical mastery of process and policy drives success for companies with objectives that require a sophisticated approach informed by real-world experience.

Travis develops and executes integrated strategies for clients across the financial services industry—from lobbying Congress to drafting regulatory comment letters to facilitating West Wing meetings. Clients rely on Travis's knowledge of people and politics at agencies such as the Treasury Department, Federal Reserve Board, Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. Having led congressional investigations, Travis now guides companies through the oversight process, including preparing C-suite executives' testimony before congressional panels. Beyond financial services, he has significant experience in international trade and data privacy.

He began his career as a secured lending attorney at a large national law firm and recently served as executive director at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Center for Capital Markets Competitiveness.
